The last update from Snapchat has stopped using dark mode by using Dark mode on your phone settings. This was actually necessary as the dark mode that we had by using the system-wide dark mode made the chat menu on Snapchat not visible. As the background would go black with the system-wide dark mode and text would still remain black. Meaning it was hard to distinguish between background and foreground content. But, after doing some brainstorming, and trying different methods this is the only method using which you can get Dark Mode on your android device. Changing Snapchat Appearance to Dark Mode is still easy as it already was on iOS devices. What is Dark Mode? For decades we had Dark mode on primitive computer displays that used CRT (Cathode Ray Tube) and had limited mobility. But We are back to where we all started but we are progressive and leading in technological development. And, yet dark mode today feels similar aesthetically to the past screens it signifies the technological advancements. In Dark Mode, the system uses a darker color palette for all screens, views, menus, and controls and uses vibrant colors to make distinguishing between foreground and background possible. You can shift to dark mode in settings related to display or your control center or control shade on Android and iOS. Dark mode from the system setting is system-wide and tries to shift the whole system apps, theme, and external apps to dark mode. Some operating systems try to implement dark mode in a very aggressive manner by forcing dark mode on apps that don't support dark mode. Apps that aren't optimized for dark mode face various issues in user interface and experience. Snapchat has a well-optimized dark mode for iOS but, doesn't yet officially have a Dark Mode for Android devices. Snapchat also has stopped the system forcing Dark Mode in their recent update. Which makes it seemingly impossible to get Dark Mode on Snapchat. Snapchat believes in discrimination and that can be understood by the Snapchat controversy Evan Spiegel, Snapchat CEO allegedly called India poor. The whole Snapchat fiasco was wild and has a lot going to it as "the app is only for rich people. I don't want to expand into poor countries like India and Spain". The reality of this statement is far from known but this is proved by the actions of Snapchat. Snapchat wants its primary consumers to be rich and considers iPhone users a priority.
